SEEK CHARTER FOR ELECTRICAL COOPERATIVE

R.E.A. Plan Will Be Explained at Mass Meeting

An application for a charter for the Adams Electrical Cooperative was signed Friday evening at a meeting of the incorporating committee and about 25 solicitors and arrangements were made for a public mass meeting next Friday evening of all Adams county residents who are interested in securing electric service for their farms, business places or residences.

At that meeting a speaker from the Rural Electrification Administration in Washington will explain fully the plan by which it is hoped that electrical service may be made available to the approximately 2,000 county farms and other rural residents who are without that necessary convenience.

The charter application was signed Friday evening by these men: Cecil Dunbar, Fairfield; A. C. Keefer, McKnightstown; Carl Black, Gardners; Ray Kohler, New Oxford; Howard Schwartz and Mervin Weikert, both of Gettysburg R. D.; Edgar Smith, York Springs, and E. C. Rohrbaugh and Roy Wolf, both of Gettysburg. The incorporators directed their attorney, Daniel E. Teeter, Esq., to proceed immediately with the incorporation proceedings.

To Survey County

Reports from township solicitors from 20 of the 21 townships in Adams county showed 700 names already on the list of those who "desire electric service."

The next step, it was stated following the meeting, is to make a final survey of the county, secure signatures to subscribers' agreements and get rights of way for the lines to be built. Then R.E.A. engineers from Washington will come here to map out power lines after which actual construction of the lines will be undertaken.

Friday evening's meeting was addressed by Carlton L. Nau, formerly of Gettysburg but now at Washington as assistant director of the Rural Electrification Administration. He outlined the procedure that should be followed in Adams county to take advantage of the federal funds that have been made available to bring electric current to rural sections of the nation. Two regional engineers accompanied him here.

R.E.A. Serves 25 Counties

The incorporators and solicitors were chosen at a meeting held July 18 at the Adams county Farm Bureau building, North Washington street, where Friday's session also was conducted. The initial meeting was arranged by G. Marion Stambaugh, manager of the county Farm Bureau Cooperative.

The Rural Electrification Administration under its present program of allotting $100,000,000 for the fiscal year has set aside about $3,000,000 for Pennsylvania. A portion of these funds is available for rural residents of Adams county if sufficient interest is shown here. At the present time farmers in 25 Pennsylvania counties are being served through the R.E.A.

Farley Appointed Head Of Coca-Cola Corporation

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 10 (AP)—James A. Farley, retiring Postmaster General and democratic national chairman, today was appointed chairman of the Coca-Cola Export corporation.

Robert W. Woodruff, chairman of the Coca-Cola company's board of directors, announced Farley had accepted a position "in charge of all export business and particularly of the expansion of our business in foreign countries."

Farley's resignation as a democratic chairman becomes effective August 17 and he leaves the cabinet August 31.

Woodruff indicated the retiring Postmaster General would report here after a vacation and said his headquarters would be in Wilmington.

A company spokesman said Farley has been "acquainted for years" with Woodruff and that his appointment climaxes discussion between the two "over a considerable period."

It is up to Farley, the spokesman added, to say whether he will disclose his salary and when he will start his new job.

Reports have been current that the retiring democratic leader, who bowed out of politics after his party's recent national convention, would head a syndicate to purchase the New York Yankees American league baseball club.

A Coca-Cola company official said he did not believe Farley's position as head foreign salesman for the soft drink company would interfere with any plans he might have about the baseball team. He added, however, that Farley must make this decision himself.

Hospital Lab Adds New Instrument

A new and modern instrument has been added to the equipment of the laboratory at the Warner hospital.

The new instrument is an electrocardiograph - stethograph. It is valued at $900 and replaces a piece of equipment that had been in use at the hospital since 1927. The former instrument did not have the stethograph feature that is part of the new one.

The stethograph is used to record heart sounds.

The new instrument is portable and may be taken in an emergency to patients' homes for use in diagnoses.

The Warner hospital is the only institution in this area where the new type of instrument is available. There is one in use in Harrisburg.

Unable to Pay Costs of Case, Countian Is Jailed

Confronted with a second surety of the peace charge as he arrived at the office of Justice of the Peace John H. Basehore Friday evening from the county jail for a hearing on a similar count brought by Mrs. Melvie Sell, Fairfield, R. D., Earl Bennett Moritz, Hamiltonban township, was dismissed by the justice after a double hearing. The justice ordered Moritz to pay the costs which totaled $22.50 or serve out that amount in jail at the rate of $1 per day. Unable to pay, Moritz returned to jail.

Harry Harbaugh, Fairfield R. D., who brought the second charge against Bennett or Moritz, who said he goes by both names, and Mrs. Sell told the justice that when they went to Moritz's house for a drink of wine Wednesday evening they were greeted with curses and a swinging ax which struck both of them several times. Harbaugh showed a bruise on his face and a cut left shoulder Mrs. Sell declared she is afraid of Moritz and added that as he swung the ax he promised he would kill both of them if they would wait until he got his gun.

Mrs. Sell said her only previous trouble with Moritz was some time ago when she had him arrested for hitting her brother over the head with a stove poker. Harbaugh said he never had any trouble with Moritz "except the time he shot off my toe."

In his own defense Moritz said he had ordered Mrs. Sell and Harbaugh out of his house because they came in "swearing and tried to make me out a liar." Moritz said he simply used the ax to enforce his order. As he dismissed the case Justice Basehore warned Moritz that another offense would bring a more severe penalty.

3 POSTOFFICES IN COUNTY WILL LIST ALL ALIENS

Gettysburg, Biglerville, Littlestown Work Starts Aug. 27

Along with other first and second class and county seat postoffices in the United States, Gettysburg, Biglerville and Littlestown offices will begin on August 27 the fingerprinting and registration of all aliens in this section. The listing of aliens, which is to be done under the provisions of the Alien Registration Act of 1940, will continue to December 26.

It is not anticipated that any additional employes will be needed to handle the registration and fingerprinting here.

George P. Black, assistant postmaster and for many years secretary of the local Civil Service examining board, has been fingerprinting Civil Service employes and applicants for years and his successor as board secretary, Arthur Warman, is preparing to help with the fingerprinting here. The necessary equipment is on hand, although forms for the registration and printing have not yet been received.

All Over 14 to Register

All aliens 14 years of age and over who apply, whether or not they reside within the delivery district of such office, are to be registered and their fingerprints taken.

Gettysburg is the only first class office in Adams county, but Biglerville and Littlestown as second class offices also will list aliens. In some sections of the country where aliens are numerous additional post offices are being designated for the work.

Postmasters are not required, according to preliminary instructions received here, to determine who shall register, to canvass for registration or to attempt to interpret the law except as set forth in the general regulations. Postmasters are to communicate with all institutions within their delivery districts and ascertain the number of alien inmates and furnish the institutions with the necessary number of the proper forms. Arrangements will also be made for postal employes to fingerprint the alien inmates.

In cases where aged or infirm persons are unable to visit the postoffice, postal employes will, where necessary, visit their homes and handle the registration there. Any information furnished by the aliens is secret and must be held in strict confidence.

Completed forms eventually will reach the Department of Justice in Washington.

PRESIDENT SEES DEFENSE WORK

Abroad Roosevelt Train, Enroute to Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt travelled today toward the New England coast for a week-end inspection of defense projects on which millions are being spent for warships and vital Army armament.

The Portsmouth (New Hampshire) Navy yard, where five submarines costing $27,500,000 are being built, was the first scheduled stop.

The program for the rest of the day included:

A cruise from Portsmouth to Boston to view destroyer construction at the Boston Navy yard, with a pause at Nahant, Massachusetts, to let Mr. Roosevelt see his youngest grandchild, Haven, son of the President's youngest son, John.

A motor trip to the arsenal at Watertown, Massachusetts, which is accelerating production of railway, sea-coast and anti-aircraft artillery and gun carriages for the Army.

The Watertown plant was one of six manufacturing arsenals which began operating around the clock today, on a three-shift basis, to speed up the output of essential war equipment.

Col. William Donovan, who commanded the "Fighting Sixty-Ninth" in the World war, boarded the President's train at Hyde Park. He was invited to tell the President what he had seen on a recently-completed secret mission in Europe, undertaken for Secretary of Navy Knox.

BELLIGERENTS TRADE AIR RAIDS OVER WIDE AREAS

British Bomb Italian Vessel at Libya

(By the Associated Press)

Belligerent powers settled down today to a punishing war of air power and the United Kingdom, the European continent and Africa felt and heard the crash of bombs, the thunder of anti-aircraft fire and chattering of machine-gun fire in growing volume.

Italy claimed further gains in her land drive into British Somaliland and all the belligerents issued communiques telling of aerial exploits.

THE BRITISH SAID:

Their aircraft bombed an Italian vessel in Tobruk harbor, Libya, setting it aflame; French pilots co-operated in reconnaissance and then R.A.F. bombers struck at positions the Italians had set up near Hargeisa; British bombers made a successful, damaging raid on Massaua, Eritrea; the British South African air force blew up two Italian bombers and damaged two others at the Italian airdrome at Neghelli, Ethiopia.

THE GERMANS SAID:

Their methodical bombers, working "on schedule," blasted British airplane and munitions plants, causing great fires and explosions, destroyed an airport runway north of Bristol and blasted shipyards; German anti-aircraft batteries brought down two British planes, bringing their total bag for the war to 1,500 "enemy" planes.

THE ITALIANS SAID:

Their columns, pushing into Somaliland, have passed Adueins, east of Hargeisa; their planes bombed Berbera, main seaport of British Somaliland; their warplanes hit British objectives along the Egyptian coast; British battleship Resolution and a destroyer were damaged seriously by bombs August 1.

Rumania Irked

Germany, serving notice she is prepared as well for a long war as for a blitzkrieg, announced through press and radio that her own food supplies and those of the Balkan states are ample to last the winter, and that the fate of the people in countries she has occupied is no great concern of hers.

There appeared to be at least one fly in the nazi ointment, however. In Bucharest, Rumanian officials declared Russia's grab of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina had deprived Rumania of crops that would have been sufficient to fill Germany's import needs.

At the same time Rumania, preparing to make axis-demanded territorial concessions to Hungary and Bulgaria, sought to smooth the way with a new series of anti-Jewish measures. They were intended to quiet the country's strongly anti-Semitic nationalists who have demanded that the government refuse to give up any territory.

With the war of aerial bombardment, argument and political maneuvering involving at least three continents, Egypt prepared to change from passive alliance with Britain to active military co-operation with the outnumbered British forces in Africa.

The press issued warnings against Italian propaganda while the armed forces stood ready to swing into action the moment Italian troops in Libya launch their anticipated drive into the land of the Pharaohs.

High Tides Pass

Germany now has withheld her threatened invasion past the five-day period of high summer tides, which ended Friday night, but aerial attacks, considered as "preparation," continue.

Tokyo newspapers saw Brtiain's withdrawal of troops from Shanghai as an attempt to come to an understanding with Japan before the "battle of Britain" begins. The United States stuck by its own position in China despite the British move.

China promised to help Indo-China if Japan undermined that semi-orphaned colony of France.

U. S. Forecasts 53,290,000-Bu. Peach Crop; 2,480,000 in State

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—The Department of Agriculture has forecast a total 1940 peach production of 53,290,000 bushels, considerably below the 1939 yield of 60,822,000 but above the ten-year average of 52,723,000.

The forecast is based on the August 1 condition of the crop.

Prospects declined slightly in the north central and western states, the department said, but the loss was more than offset by favorable growing conditions in other sections. In ten southern states the production estimate was eight per cent higher than on July 1 because of favorable conditions.

The 1940 forecast and the 1939 yield for principal producing states included:

New Jersey, 1,512,000 and 1,435,000; Pennsylvania, 2,480,000 and 2,460,000; Ohio, 492,000 and 1,212,000.

COMPROMISE ON CONSCRIPTION ISSUE OPPOSED

Senators Attack Substitute; Resume Debate Monday

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—Administration leaders turned a cold shoulder today to talk of a compromise in the senate fight over conscription.

Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, democratic floor leader, expressed the opinion to reporters that conscription and voluntary enlistments could not be linked successfully in such a system as that offered by Senator Maloney (D.-Conn.), as a substitute for the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

Maloney would require the registration of all men from 21 through 30, as would the Burke-Wadsworth bill, but he would delay the draft until January 1 while voluntary enlistments were sought. If these enlistments did not fill the Army's quota, conscription would be ordered.

(Army enlistments totaled 23,442 in June and 31,958 in July, a peacetime record. The Army's strength was 270,183 on July 31, and will be brought to 322,922 as quickly as possible.)

Maloney said his proposal appeared to be attracting increasing support, despite administration opposition and the reluctance of conscription opponents to agree that the draft might be needed while the nation was at peace.

One of the latter group, Senator Nye (R-N.D), said he was willing to have men from 21 through 30 registered in order to have the draft machinery ready if war came, but could see no reason for abandoning the traditional American peacetime policy of voluntary enlistments.

He predicted that supporters would find it necessary to compromise the Burke-Wadsworth bill before they could obtain senate approval.

The senate will resume debate on the Burke-Wadsworth measure Monday after a week-end recess.

While crowded galleries looked on Friday, Senator Holman (R-Ore) excited the senate with an assertion that he had learned from "authoritative military sources" of "imminent peril of invasion of Alaska" and the "endangering of the entire Pacific coast."

Holman later explained to reporters that he was not referring to any immediate possibility of invasion, but regarded Japan as the No. 1 threat to American peace and looked to Alaska as the most vulnerable point of attack.

Many Fields Too Dry for Fall Seeding; Crop Service Reports

Harrisburg, Aug. 10 (AP).—Pennsylvania crops have proceeded favorably despite high temperatures in the latter part of July, the federal-state service reported Friday.

Throughout the state, temperatures averaged .7 degrees above normal, and precipitation was nearly an inch below normal.

"Sunshine was ample, and where moisture was sufficient, crops generally made good progress, though the handicap of the late spring has not yet been fully overcome," the report said. "Southeast of the mountains, many fields now are too dry to plow for fall seeding."

Specific crop conditions reported at the beginning of this month:

"Corn developed rapidly during the last two weeks of the month. Many fields are in tassel but the crop is generally late, especially in northern counties.

"The winter wheat harvest continued in the central and northern counties, with very little threshing done in these areas, and quite a bit southeast of the mountains still in the shock. Early threshing returns are not up to expectations. Reports on the out-turn of rye are generally favorable. The winter barley crop has proved disappointing to many growers.

"Oats harvest continues in southeastern counties with yields slightly below expectations. A good crop generally is expected in other sections.

"Buckwheat planting was delayed because of the lateness of the season. There was a sharp reduction in acreage in many localities.

"July heat was hard on the Pennsylvania potato crop but well-sprayed fields stood up fairly well. Condition of the crop as a whole is good. Some localities, mostly in the northwestern part of the state, are urgently in the need of rain; others report considerable tipburn and some fields are showing blight, but not of serious proportions. The early crop is maturing rapidly; harvesting in the commercial areas is at the peak, with yields about average. The late crop needs more moisture and cooler weather.

"Harvest of timothy and mixed hays is still in progress in the northern counties. Quality has been reduced in many localities by rain. An excellent second crop of alfalfa is being put up in the southern part of the state.

"Fruit crops have withstood the intense heat fairly well. The apple crop as a whole is making satisfactory progress. The peach crop is still very promising. The Erie grape crop is 10 days late and in need of more moisture and continued warm weather."

Sports Roundup

BY BILL WHITE

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Just to save you a lot of worrying here are football's probable kingpins: East—Cornell and Fordham; southwest—Texas Aggies and S.M.U.; Big Six—Nebraska; north central—North Dakota; southeastern—Alabama and Tennessee; southern—Duke; Big Seven—Colodado; Rocky mountain—Colorado Mines. . . Be prepared for a lot of red hot political forecasts in this culyum beginning Monday. Last report we had of Col. Brietz he was in the midst of a republican caucus in Charlotte, N. C., in company of Jake Wade, sports ed. of the Observer. . . There'll be 44 huskies on hand when Jim Yeager, of Iowa state, calls the grid roll on what looks like one of his best teams. . . Monday is red letter day down in Gren-witch village. "Mayor" Jimmy Kelly is tossing his annual party for Joe DiMag, with every kid in town hoping to get an autographed ball—or a handshake. . .

Substitute's Serenade—
We'd like to know
Where we can go
In search of occupation.
Time's refusal to shirk
Leaves us without work
It's the end of Brietz's vacation!

It can happen to the Injuns— Every unassisted triple play made in the American league has been made by, or against, Cleveland. In 1909 Neal Ball, Injun shortstop, turned the trick against Boston; in 1923 George Burns, Cleveland first sacker, made one against Boston, and in 1927 Johnny Neun, Detroit first baseman made a tripler against Cleveland. And the only unassisted triple play ever made in a World series was turned in by Bill Wambsganss, Cleveland second baseman against the Dodgers in 1920.

There are positively no prizes of- fered for quips about Mike Jacobs feeling right at home with the Dodgers, the fighting-est team in baseball. . . Gene Normile, who once managed Jack Dempsey is suing the Mexican government, claiming they took a racetrack from him. . . Larry Davis, whose daddy was captain of the 1919 Penn cage team, will don the Red and Blue this year. . . Lynn C. Doyle, in the Philly Evening Bulletin says the way the Phils and A's are hitting you'd think they are playing the numbers instead of baseball. . . Down Tulsa way they're expecting the great Ching Johnson to wind up as playing coach of their hockey club. . . Borger, Texas, will be the end of the long, long baseball trail for old Wilcy Moore. . . Oklahoma City may make the Missouri valley A.A.U. basketball league stand up and take notice, if Meyer Greenberg decides to sponsor a team. . . Walter (Long Shot) Cox trained the first four money winning horses in the 1929 Hambletonian, and drove the winner, Walter Dear. It's never been done since.

One-minute interview — "Billy Conn will need only one chance (not two as Bob Pastor had) to show Joe Louis has lost his punch. I don't know how or where it went to, but Louis hasn't got it anymore" —Johnny Ray, Conn's manager.

Idaville Wins 5-Inning Tilt From Boiling Springs

In a five-inning ball game, called because of darkness, Idaville won over Boiling Springs by a score of 2 to 1. Russ Kane, pitching for Idaville, allowed the visitors only two hits. He struck out nine of the Bubblers.

Moe Clepper, on the mound for Boiling Springs, gave up four hits to the local nine, and he struck out four players.

On Monday evening Cumberland will play Idaville on the latter's diamond, and on Wednesday evening Idaville will play Plainfield at Plainfield.

Youth Takes His Bath When Policemen Arrive

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—It took a police emergency call to quell 12-year-old David Hershkowitz' tantrum over his mother's request that he take a bath.

David really put on a show. Folks from all around his East Side neighborhood came to watch the spectacle of a husky lad standing perilously close to the edge of a third-floor fire escape and shouting to his mother:

"If you won't leave me alone, I'll take a jump."

Somebody called the cops. Two patrol cars answered, and out of one stepped Patrolman Edward Stack. David yielded at the sight of the uniform—and took his bath.

STOCK REPORT

New York, Aug. 10 (AP)—Quiet strength of selected industrials gave stocks a mild rallying hue in today's market. While many leaders loafed throughout the brief session, favorites managed to tack on further recoveries of fractions to a point or so. Buying flurries occasionally lifted volume and transfers for the two hours were around 175,000 shares.

WEATHER OUTLOOK

The weather outlook for the week beginning Monday follows: North and middle Atlantic states: Showers Monday night or Tuesday and again about Friday. Warmer Monday, cooler Tuesday night, warmer middle and latter part of week.

Flashes of Life

By The Associated Press

EXPENSIVE RESCUES

Ocean Cty, Md.—Elmer Perdue and Louis Joseph found it costly business rescuing two girls from possible drowning. Perdue, who plunged into the waves fully clothed, watched his pocketbook float away during the rescue. Joseph, who had taken off his trousers and shoes, returned to shore to find "some beachcomber had made off with my wallet."

CANDIDATE FOR DIVORCE

Clearwater, Fla.—Nelson F. Conger stated as one of the grounds of his divorce action, the "insatiable appetite" of Mrs. Conger for politics which jeopardized his Civil Service job. "She unsuccessfully sought election to various offices for many years," the court papers read, "but her failure has in no way dulled her political sword."

BULLY SIGHT

Walahalla, S. C.—Pete Bauknight parked his auto near the home of a farmer, returned a short time later to see it being smashed to pieces by a ferocious bull. The bull's ire was aroused by the sight of his image in the car's headlights, Bauknight said.

IT'S SKOKIE NOW

Niles Center, Ill.—After wrangling for two years about it, this Chicago suburb has finally agreed to change its name. A committee of village trustees and civic leaders decided the community should henceforth be known as Skokie (pronounced Sko-kee, accent on the first syllable). Citizens clamoring for a new name said Niles Center made the suburb sound like a hick town. Opponents said Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and Kalamazoo, Michigan, were doing all right despite their names. Skokie is an Indian name. The village is in the Skokie valley.

FLYING POACHERS

Kane, Ill.—Starlings here have picked up where the college boys left off a year ago. John Freer reports the birds have nearly cleaned his rock garden of gold fish, which they devour in nearby trees.

WHAT STARTED THOSE BALTIMORE WHITE STEPS

A columnist of the Washington Post, Pendleton Hogan, writing on the white steps of Baltimore—he makes the point by the way, that as a sort of trade mark they are valuable to the town—assets that he can obtain no information as to how Baltimore came to have white steps in the first place.

John O'Ren, in the Baltimore Sun comes forward to tell just how it happened:

The explanation is unromantic. It is simply that when the older part of Baltimore was being built, white marble was the cheapest ornamental stone available, because there were great marble quarries at the very edge of the town. Since it makes a pleasing contrast with red brick, contractors used it lavishly, and once some thousands of the better houses were equipped with white marble steps, it became the fashion to paint the wooden steps of the cheaper houses white in imitation of marble. These are the simple facts.

AGE AND DIRT

Two small boys at the Salvation Army dinner put their grimy hands side by side on the tablecloth.

"Min's dirtier'n yourn!" exclaimed one, triumphantly.

"Huh!" said the other, disdainfully, "you're two years older'n me." —Exchange.

DEATHS OVER NIGHT

(By the Associated Press)

Scranton, Pa.—Edward A. Gallagher, regional executive of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, died in a hospital.

Tamaqua, Pa.—The Rev. George Gebert, D.D., of Tamaqua, 82, for 47 years pastor of Zion's Evangelical Lutheran church here, died at his home. He was a trustee of the Good Shepherd home, Allentown.

'41 AUTO OUTPUT SHOWS INCREASE

Detroit, Aug. 10 (AP)—Automotive News in its curent survey of motor plant activity estimates this week's production of cars and trucks at 14,010 units reflecting a slight increase in 1941 model assemblies over last week's 12,225 completions. Output this week a year ago totaled 23,076 units. The trade paper says that by the middle of September all plants should be in full swng on 1941 models.

Final assembly operations on 1941 models were started this week at Pontiac, while Hudson and Packard boosted their output of new models considerably. Ford and Mercury continued as the only makers still turning out 1940 models, but operations at these plants are virtually completed.

Dodge truck continued as the only Chrysler division running final assembly lines this week, although changeover operations at Plymouth are nearing completion.

Firemen Soak Ruins Of $125,000 York Blaze

Weary firemen, directing plug streams through roofs, doors and windows of the Harry S. Ebert building at 10-12 West Market street, York, on Friday were wetting down smouldering remains of what was McCrory's five and ten cent store.

Consumed in an all-night fire which broke out at 10:40 p. m. Thursday, the McCrory store's $35,000 stock was a total loss and the Ebert building was largely in ruins.

Next door, at the Wiest department store, the management was taking stock of heavy losses from smoke and from the Wiest store basement water four feet deep was being pumped into sewers. The Wholesale Hosiery suffered from smoke and water in the cellar. Worth's women's apparel store, two doors from McCrory's on the east, also suffered heavy smoke damage.

The total damage to the three properties and stock in the stores is conservatively estimated at $125,000.

Heavy smoke, gas from a burst main in the McCrory store and injuries received in fighting the blaze took a heavy toll among the firefighters.

The cause of the fire has not been determined.

POLICEMAN HERO

Sharpsburg, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP)—Leaping from his automobile at a grade crossing, Patrolman Anthony Sas grabbed a 92-year-old woman and carried her to safety as two freight trains roared by Friday. The woman, partially deaf, had not noticed the trains approaching.

Two Fugitives Held After Gun Fight; Woman Is Killed

Oilton, Okla., Aug. 10 (AP).—Two prison fugitives who hurled the shot-torn body of a woman clad in red from their speeding automobile, wounded Oilton's police chief and kidnaped a farmer, were held today as officers hunted a motive for the woman's death.

The gunmen, Bill Hall, 25 and Joe Lovelace, 24, surrendered to highway patrolmen west of here Friday night after a running gunfight. Hall had been shot five times.

Bill Glimp, of Drumright, the farmer hostage, had a flesh wound in one leg.

Sheriff L. L. Fisher said Lovelace declared the slain woman, whom he identified as Jeanne Culp, 30, Asher, Oklahoma, was thrown from the car because "she seemed to be dead" and Hall complained that her body interfered with his driving.

As they drove through Oilton following a pistol-shotgun duel in which Police Chief Ben D. Clark was critically wounded, Lovelace said he noticed the woman was badly hit. He contended, Fisher said, that he did not know who shot her, nor did he account for her presence in the car.

Clark and Constable C. L. Irwin, hunting three men who robbed an Oilton restaurant earlier in the day, halted a black sedan in which Hall, Lovelace, the woman and a negro were riding.

The officers leaped to the running boards. A point-blank shotgun charge knocked Clark to the pavement. Irwin emptied his pistol into the car, fell off as it sped away.

The body of the attractive, red-haired young woman was found on a business street a short time later.

Speeding southward over a country road, the gunmen took another car from Earl Williams, Oilton. Later, near Drumright, they kidnaped Glimp and commandeered his eleven-year-old automobile.

The negro was gone when the fugitives reached Glimp's farm and Lovelace told Fisher he apparently jumped out of the car after the Oilton gunfight.

GETS NEW TOOTH

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP)—John Allardyce, 64, who lost his teeth 20 years ago, is getting at least one replacement. A dentist told Allardyce an irritation under his lower plate was caused by a new tooth breaking through the gum.

NUPTIALS NIL

Mifflintown, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP)—Only one marriage license was issued in Juniata county during July, George E. Beward, register and recorder, reported today. The monthly low record has been duplicated only twice in seven years.

256 RELIGIOUS GROUPS IN U. S.

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—The census bureau today listed 256 religious denominations in the United States with 55,807,366 members.

This count — nearly half the population — was based on 1936 statistics, which have just been completed. The count was made by correspondence with officers of the different denominations.

The membership total was about a million larger than a similar count in 1926, which showed 54,576,346. No major shifts were shown among major religious branches, however.

Economies forced on churches by the depression, while not shown in membership figures, were demonstrated by a $518,953,571 calculation of total church expenditures in 1936. In 1926, the total was $817,214,528.

Value of church edifices also dropper from $3,839,500,610 in 1926 to $3,411,875,467 in 1936.

The largest single denomination was Roman Catholic with 19,914,937 members.

Other large denominations included: Jewish, 4,641,184; Negro Baptists, 3,782,464; Methodist Episcopal church, 3,509,763; Southern Baptist convention, 2,700,155; Methodist Episcopal church, south, 2,061,683; Presbyterian church in the United States of America, 1,797,927; Protestant Episcopal church, 1,735,335; Northern Baptist convention, 1,329,044; United Lutheran church in America, 1,286,612; Disciples of Christ, 1,196,315; Evangelical Lutheran synod of Missouri, Ohio and other states, 1,192,553, and Congregational and Christian churches, 976,388.

Cudahy Called Home to Report to Roosevelt

London, Aug 10 (AP)—John Cudahy, United States Ambassador to Belgium who created a sensation in London by advocating that the United States feed nazi-occupied countries, left by plane for Lisbon today en route to the United States, to which he had been called home to report to President Roosevelt.

London newspapers, which have been attacking Cudahy bitterly for the remarks he made in a recent interview, headlined the news of his recall and reprimand Friday by the State department.

The Daily Mail today quoted Cudahy as saying "I do not retract one word what I said." The ambassador told The Asociated Press Friday night tht "I have no comment to make."

The Daily Mail said Cudahy asserted "undue publicity" had been given his remarks.

He had said Belgium and other German-occupied territories now blockaded by the British navy would face famine this winter if they did not receive food from America. He also commented favorably on the conduct of the German army of occupation.

SPIRITUAL LONELINESS

I HAVE often wondered why it is that those who seem to have the greatest capacity for friendship appear to be the most lonely. You note this as you read of many of the outstanding characters in history, and you meet with such people often in everyday life. It is not merely a loneliness of physical companionship, but a spiritual loneliness—difficult to define, but existing nevertheless.

This spiritual loneliness is to be noted in many an autobiography, and especially among leaders in public life, whose vision extends far beyond their own time and place.

A friend at luncheon recently told me of a man, whose name is known around the world because of his public services, and incidentally because of his great wealth and material possessions, yet I was told that he was a very lonely man." Neither wealth nor public acclaim has brought to that man the nourishment for which his heart apparently has craved. Especially for these later years of his.

More than at any other time in the history of the world is this spiritual loneliness among people evident. With force and brutal aggression sweeping a large part of the world, the faith of man is challenged as never before. "What is to be the end?" he asks. And who can supply the answer to his search of mind? In spiritual loneliness he walks through faith alone toward the dawn of a realized dream.

The spiritual forces of the individual, or of the nation, may temporarily be in an unorganized state, but their ultimate triumph against all subversive attempts to dislodge them from the world will end only in failure and defeat. The very loneliness of those guarding, with the courage of their hearts, these spiritual forces, is evidence of their superior fibre.

Courage anew to you—lonely in heart and spirit—plod and pray on! Tomorrow will reveal to you its "noon-day light."

JUST FOLKS

by EDGAR A. GUEST

SUCCESS

'Tis part of the code that a man must be
Honest and kind and clean.
For what is the good of his skill if he
Is bitter and harsh and mean?
And what is the worth of the prize he earns
If after the night comes down
Nobody rejoices, as he returns
From the care of the busy town?

It isn't enough to be shewdly wise
Or clever of hand or strong.
The lasting joy of a lifetime lies
In friendship and mirth and song.
Unless something of love and kindness clings
To the triumphs a man may win
The gains he makes are pitiful things
And selfish and cold as sin.

There's little pride in a brain, all-smart.
Mere cunning and strength are cold.
Man must be more than a fighting heart
And more than a killer cold.
He must grace with character all his deeds,
Be honest and clean and kind,
For the life successful also needs
The triumphs of heart and mind.

The Literary Guidepost

"COUNTRY EDITOR," by Henry Beetle Hough (Doubleday, Doran: $3).

IT IS to be hoped that all the books which will follow the success of Bellamy Partridge's "Country Lawyer" will be as good as Henry Beetle Hough's "Country Editor." Though of course they will not be.

Mr. Hough first impinged on our consciousness when some weeks ago a special edition of his "Vineyard Gazette" came along, the entire paper devoted to his other brainchild, "Country Editor." Enclosed was a copy of the "Gazette" itself, so that one might see just what sort of paper Mr. Hough was writing about. It is one of the few remaining local weeklies—that is to say, one of the few still run on the old and authentic principle of community interest and personal interest. It was very well printed, very well edited, useful looking.

Now Mr. Hough's book is here as well, and from it the reader learns how it happened that a young couple from New York took over a paper founded in 1846 and continued it successfully in the face of their friends' belief that they had succumbed to some sort of living death on Martha's Vineyard. It happened because Mr. and Mrs. Hough liked running the paper, and still do. They were young when they went to the Vineyard, and they still are on the sunny side. So is their paper.

The book is not merely a series of character sketches, though there are dozens of these. It is a statement of the philosophy of the small newspaper owner. It is an exposition of the reasons why many people prefer to live intelligently in small towns instead of running day after day from stuffy apartment to stuffy office down the rut of the subway. It will tell its readers that small things are not necessarily unimportant, and that being one cog in a billion-dollar corporation is not necessarily the pattern of the good life.

Add to this (none of it stated dogmatically, but rather as the result of experiment and experience) a sauce of Vineyard life, and you have something unique. People like Captain Zebina B. Godfrey of the clothing store; John Bent the market man who painted pictures; Charlie Haskins of the wonderful though useless memory; Dora Trapp Carrington, who wrote Gazette correspondence and papers on "The Music of Beethoven" and finally conducted her column from an old ladies' home—these people are the salt of any earth, and particularly so when they have matured on so salty an island as Martha's Vineyard.

Chapter 41

Time Stands Still

I had forgotten to latch that bedroom screen!

My senses came back to me. I reached a wildly trembling hand to the light bulb of the lamp on the table and turned it until darkness fell like a heavy curtain. Then I slid out of my chair and down on all fours under the table. The chair teetered for an instant as I released my weight from it, then it crashed heavily to the floor.

I heard the door flung open against it, the clatter of metal on the polished floor and the muffled thud of a falling body—a thud made sickening and horrifying by the lack of any vocal accompaniment of grunts or curses. Only that silent, moving presence quietly disentangling itself from the fallen chair and preparing to stalk me.

If I could reach the corridor door—

I began to crawl toward it, hoping my sense of direction would not fail me, praying that my shaking arms and legs would support me, fighting a stupefying terror at the knowledge that I was shut in with Sandra's murderer.

Silence now. I might have been alone in the room. I held my breath for fear it would betray me and my heartbeats shook my whole body. Then, almost simultaneously, there were two sounds—the fain creak of a board in the corridor, and the scratching of a match within the room.

Not two yards from me a small flame licked the darkness, showing me a white hand and a face that was black and blank except for two malevolent eyes. It was then that I lost all control and screamed.

The flame described an arc in the air and went out. In the same instant steel hands were at my throat in a lunging attack that threw me violently backward, and my head was being beaten with dogged, diabolic intent against the hard, bare floor.

I heard the doorknob rattle and the drive of a body against the locked door. Then a bomb exploded in my head and I heard nothing more.

'Back To Stay'

I went places for a while. The screaming wind between the worlds caught me up and whirled me past Mars, past the flaming outer planets, and there abandoned me to the long plunge back to earth. Time stood still while I dove through space until I brought up quivering, with daylight striking me like a flying anvil between the eyes.

An involuntary groan shattered my skull into a thousand pieces, then I felt hands on my shoulders forcing me back and down, and I found that I still had a little fight left in me.

"Hold it!" said a startled, familiar voice. My shoulders were pinned down, my arms pinioned. The shooting pains began to subside. Gradually it came to me that there was a pillow under my tortured head, and that the voice was telling me that I was all right.

I opened my eyes a wary slit and saw Adam's face, ludicruously concerned, close to mine. I saw other things, too—blank, unfamiliar walls, a screen in front of a window. The air smelled antiseptic. I began to draw conclusions, and to remember. It was coming back to me—that turning doorknob, the awful stalking in the dark.

"Kay, don't you know me?" he was asking anxiously.

There must be something I ought to tell him while this moment of sanity lasted.

"'Lover's Return," I whispered.

"Yes, dear. I'm back. Back to stay." There was a catch in his voice. He put his cheek, rough and unshaven, against mine.

He was being very dense. And my head hurt

"Not you," I muttered crossly.

He sat up and said "What?" in such a funny voice that I had to pry my eyes open and submit to the torture of focusing them so I could see him. His thick white lashes were rayed as if with blond mascara. The puffy blue circles under his eyes were the only color on his face anywhere. His expression of misery was obscurely satisfying. I waited a moment before I dispelled it.

"Manuscript," I said at last.

"Oh, that!!" he dismissed it with a wave of his hand and continued to look at me with such brooding anxiety that I grew restive.

"You look as if you'd been trying to drink New York dry," I observed, and closed my eyes again on the fireworks that long speech had set off.

"You're no magazine cover yourself," he said absently.

He got up from the edge of the bed, and when I stole a glance at him presently he was pacing the floor.

"Don't go so far away," I said, in a voice that insisted on fading to a whisper.

He came back then and took my hands between both of his.

"I'm still scared," he said huskily. "You've been unconscious for eight hours. Your eyes were open and staring and you didn't seem to breathe. They said you'd be all right, but—I've been here all night. I swore I'd never leave you again if—"

Tears welled into his eyes.

"Don't—please don't" I begged. "It wasn't your fault. And I feel quite well, really."

But he went on as if I had not spoken.

"I knew what a fool I'd been when I read about Sandra in the afternoon papers. I was in Penn Station waiting for a train that would have brought me here this afternoon. I went to Mitchell Field instead and found an army pilot to fly me out here. And then I was too late. They were carrying you out to the ambulance when my taxi pulled up. They thought at first your skull was fractured—that mop of hair was all that saved you—"

"You can tell your redheaded grandchildren that," I murmured.

He tried to laugh, but it wasn't a very successful effort.

A nurse came in then and took my pulse and my temperature and engaged in a brief argument with Adam in which he lost, of course.

He stood by the bed for a moment, looking down at me intently as if to assure himself that I was really there.

"Go to sleep," he said huskily, then vanished through the door the nurse was pointedly holding open.

Later in the morning Captain Jones came in with a strange gray-haired officer whom I had never seen. He proved to be the senior surgeon, just returned from leave. He was friendly and reassuring as he felt gently of my aching head, examined my eyes and asked what seemed ridiculous questions until I remembered that they do that to football players who have been knocked out.

My neck was stiff, too, and for a moment I couldn't think why until I remembered those steel hands.

The senior surgeon nodded when I told him about it, but when he spoke it was across me, to Captain Jones.

"Take a look at these bruises," he said dryly. "Nothing phony bout them." Captain Jones, I saw with surprise, was very red. "And you might read that chapter on "Malingering" in Ford's Military Medical Administration. Not that you'll find much application for it in peacetime," he added more tolerantly, "but it's interesting reading. Surprising to what lengths people will go to fake a disability. He says, if I remember correctly, that a copper penny, bound on with a cloth soaked in vinegar, leaves a very fair imitation of a bruise—"

It was about then that I began to get the drift of the conversation.

"You're talking about Sandra, aren't you?" I demanded, and then remembered something. "So that was why she got the vinegar from the mess hall—and the towel Felicia said looked as if Jeff had been polishing brass with it—"

The surgeon looked at me sharply.

"Any idea why she should want to fake a black eye?" he asked.

"Yes. Oh yes. To take out a grudge on Jeff. I'm glad I found that out. I don't feel so sorry for her now. She had potentialities, didn't she?"

"She had indeed." He paused, looked from Captain Jones to me in some embarrassment. "Of course I was only teasing the captain here for not having discovered the fake when he first examined the body. Anyone might have overlooked it. Matter of fact, he's had a good bit on his mind this past fortnight. Three violent deaths, and his wife very ill in Chicago. She's all right now, I'm glad to say, and the mother of a fine boy. The scamp arrived ahead of schedule, otherwise I wouldn't have been on leave—"

I congratulated the captain and saw that he looked nicer when he smiled. Then the surgeon delivered his opinion that I was in my mind and had nothing to worry about.. X-rays taken during the night showed no fracture; my coma had probably been due ninety per cent to shock. I should remain in bed for a few days to give any mild concussion time to subside.

They went away, and I partook sparingly of a modest lunch. Afterward I slept. In my dazed mental state I had no curiosity about the night's events. It was easier to lie there, safe and thankful, thinking of nothing but my aches and pains and the blessing of being alive.

NATIONAL GUARD NEEDS TRAINING, OFFICERS CLAIM

Deplore Lack of Equipment for Maneuvers

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 10 (AP).—The First Army's commanding officers, while deploring equipment shortages in northern New York's big war games, pushed troops through gruelling maneuvers today convinced that intensive training is more needed at present than modern arms.

Aides in the rigid instruction program leading to the three-day "battle" opening August 19 between invading "Blacks" and defending "Blues" asserted that many of the nearly 100,000 troops should have "much more training" before using latest weapons.

"The obvious lack of equipment was disclosed at last year's war maneuvers," one authoritative source maintained. "This year the chief objective should be training and more training because some of us feel certain that we will get modern arms as soon as possible."

Special training, for example, was ordered for a New England National Guard division which contains, officers said, about 600 rookies who "never fired a rifle."

Col. James A. Stevens, regular Army instructor, told the 29th Division that the troops should learn new systems well and conceded "many of us have been confused by changing methods in Army procedure."

Endangered by "Bombing"

Two generals, other officers and a group of newspapermen and news reel camera men narrowly escaped a "bombing" when five pound flour sacks dropped by airplanes which were aiming at tanks, exploded at their feet.

Four light reconnaissance planes were demonstrating methods of stopping four tanks from a height of about three hundred feet. One of the "bombs" shot from the rack and burst in a white dusty shower before the startled onlookers.

The observers withdrew slightly for the remaining attacks but the plane crew members acting on radio signal from the pilots were more successful in the combat and splattered the tanks as well as their occupants with flour.

As the land forces simulated platoon combat over the 1,300 acre battleground—a preliminary form of the training which shortly will be enacted with increasingly larger units—the air corps engaged in night and day flights.

Start for Maneuvers

Harrisburg, Aug. 10 (AP).—Six more artillery regiments of Pennsylvania National Guardsmen rolled northward today to join their comrades in northern New York state for summer maneuvers.

The units are those which practiced firing this week, and others which will practice at the end of the New York "war games." Each Guardsman will have three weeks in the field.

ROB TICKET AGENCY

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (AP)—Four men brandishing revolvers threatened two persons and robbed the real estate and steamship ticket agency of Frank DiBeredino of $400. The proprietor and his sister, Helen, 25, alone in the office Friday, were forced to face the wall and were unable to give police a good description of the bandits. The four escaped in an automobile which police said had been stolen.

Backgrounds of Adams County

By B. F. MACPHERSON

No. 151—Rev. Father Thomas Barton

TODAY we continue our notes on the Robenette graveyard. Last week we wrote concerning the family of James Moorhead, soldier of the Revolution. In this column we will conclude our data on the Moorhead clan.

As you may remember from last week, James Moorhead was a son of Robert Moorhead of County Clare, Ireland. Robert Moorhead, his wife and family emigrated to America in or prior to 1748. The son, James, married Elizabeth Fletcher, and they became the parents of eight children. These children were listed in our column for last week (No. 150). The Moorhead family was originally Episcopalian, but the later generations have turned to the Presbyterian church.

During the war of the Revolution we find James Moorhead, in 1780, listed among the "Miscellaneous Officers of York County," (Pennsylvania Archives—6th Series—Volume 2).

We know little pertaining to the immediate family, or the children of James and Elizabeth (Fletcher) Moorhead. The inscription from the stones marking the graves of additional members of the Moorhead family in this cemetery are as follows:

1. "Fletcher Moorhead | died July 31, 1864 | Aged 66 years. |"

Note: A son of James Moorhead, soldier of the Revolution, and his wife, Elizabeth Fletcher Moorhead.

2. "Sally | wife of Fletcher Moorhead | died September 23, 1846 | Aged 79 years. |"

Note: Sally Livingston, the wife of Fletcher Moorhead, and the daughter-in-law of James Moorhead, soldier of the Revolution and his wife, Elizabeth Fletcher Moorhead.

This concludes our survey in Robenette (Leer's) graveyard. If any of our readers could give any additional data it would be greatly appreciated.

* * *

AT this time we return to Christ Episcopal churchyard to write of a man who left the vivid imprint of his personality on this, the first Episcopal congregation in what is now Adams county. The Rev. Father Thomas Barton was the first resident priest to minister to this congregation and in addition to this he served as a Chaplain in Forlies' Expedition of the French and Indian war. Father Barton is not buried in this cemetery, but we feel that he should be included among our survey of soldiers' sons of Christ Episcopal congregation.

The Rev. Thomas Barton was born in Ireland in 1730, and was educated at the University of Dublin. In 1753 he came to America and was employed for two years as assistant tutor at the Philadelphia Academy (now University of Pennsylvania). During these two years, at certain intervals, he visited the church people of York, Hundington and Carlisle. At that time he was only a layman, but through the intercession of these same people he was persuaded to return to England to study for Holy Orders. He remained in England for two years as a Postulant, and in 1755 was ordained and returned to America as a missionary of the "Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts."

Father Barton arrived in Philadelphia April 16, 1755 and the people of the Hundington congregation (Christ Episcopal), went to meet him with their wagons and took his affects to his new home at Hundington in the latter part of May and on his arrival there was heartily welcomed by the people.

As you may know there had been a church at this site for many years previous to Father Barton's arrival (1755), and he found that the people had been meeting every Sunday to have one of their number read the prayers for the day. The congregation also boasted a rectory, and here the missionary made his home.

Shortly after his arrival Father Barton called a meeting of the Vestry Boards of St. John's church at Carlisle, Christ church at Hundington and St. John's church at York. The relative importance of the Hundington congregation is shown by the fact that it was decided that Father Barton should officiate three Sundays out of every six at Hundington, two at Carlisle, and one at York. The work of the priest was far-reaching and effective. It extended into what is now Lancaster, York, Adams, Cumberland and Dauphin counties. History tells us that Father Barton was an important personage in the Colonial history of York and Cumberland counties.

We will conclude the sketch on Father Barton next week.

HOLLYWOOD

Hollywood.—The camera has taken a sedative. It's calming down. It's shaking off the jitters. In fact, it's so calm that it's standing still—which is practically revolutionary. "Reactionary" would be a better word, for in standing still it is going back to the habit it formed of necessity in pioneer film times.

For, once upon a time, the moving picture camera never moved. It stood on a tripod and aimed its lenses in one direction, and the actors moved in front of it. If they moved too far, they were "out of the scene" and they had to move back to get in again.

Then the camera began pivoting on its tripod, began to look around from side to side. Then it limbered up some more and climbed on a truck, or "dolly." This permitted it to travel a little, to move up close to the actors and move away from them without "breaking" the scene or cutting.

After a while a "dolly" wasn't enough of a trick. The camera called for and got a crane. This allowed it not only to move forward and back, but to swoop down on or away from a close-up.

* * *

Directors, especially the imports from Europe, espoused the jittery camera and view with each other in obtaining trick effects. The camera developed "monkey blood" and swung from ceilings, stood on its head, and climbed rafters. It went on a spree, and then talkies brought the morning after.

The jittery camera had to be enclosed in a "sweatbox" to deaden its operating sounds. Actors worked and perspired in tiny, stuffy sets, practically stood still directly under microphones so their voices could be recorded. This lasted nearly two years, until the engineers began to take the mystery out of sound and learned to control it and the talkies went outdoors again. It wasn't long before the microphone, as well as the camera, was traveling. Rouben Mamoulian had himself a dolly spree on his first picture, "Applause." He made that camera and mike wander down and up corridors and streets and rooms until the audience got fairly dizzy trying to keep up with it.

* * *

Lately John Ford made a picture called "The Grapes of Wrath." His chief cameraman was Gregg Toland. Together they slipped the camera a powder; they made it stand still through most of the footage. More recently they made together a picture called "The Long Voyage Home." They doubled the powder. The picture had no "dolly" or crane shots. They "panned" only when strictly necessary. They let the characters do the moving while the camera stood still.

Toland says the method helps to keep audience attention on the story and characters and away from movie mechanics. It keeps the camera out of the scene, gives better "composition," eliminates softness and blurring, gives clear definition and character to actors' faces.

It also saves time, he says.

And time saves money, and—for that reason if no other—the cameras of Hollywood may be expected to calm down even further in the near future.

2 INJURED AS HORSE BOLTS

Chambersburg, Aug. 10.—A spectacular runaway occurred in the heart of the Chambersburg business district Friday afternoon, causing the injury of Cyrus Wenger, 67, St. Thomas R. 1, farmer, and his wife, occupants of the buggy to which the horse was hitched.

The holdback strap of the harness broke as the team passed through Memorial square, and the buggy surging forward struck and frightened the horse. The buggy veered into a post of a fountain plot in the center of the Square, and the horse broke away yanking Wenger, who held the reins, onto the street.

Galloping westward in Lincoln Way, the horse was finally overtaken and halted by Patrolman Chauncey Lemaster at a point a mile and a half west of Memorial square. Lemaster seized the horse from the running board of a commandeered automobile.

Wenger wa streated by a physician for hip and head injuries, and Mrs. Wenger for a laceration of the wrist and shock.

The antelope is one of the fleetest North American animals.

ARMY ORDERS 80-TON TANKS

Philadelphia, Aug. 10 (AP).—Officials of the Baldwin locomotive works expect to begin "within six months" production of $5,689,725 worth of giant tanks for the United States Army.

Information on the design of the huge 70-to 80-ton "land battleships" remained a closely-guarded secret but announcement that 50 had been ordered slipped out in a routine statement Friday by the national defense commission at Washington.

William H. Harman, vice president of the Baldwin works, said he expected the order to "be signed and delivered next week after a few minor changes have been completed," and added:

"We will be able to build the tanks with our present facilities, for there isn't much difference between building locomotives and building tanks. It will take about six months to clear up the engineering details and then we can start turning them our rapidly."

He estimated the cost of each of the tanks at about $113,794, but said that much of this would be for engineering and mechanical expenses and additional tanks would cost considerably less.

Washington observers expected the huge machines to resemble those used successfully in the German assault on Belgium and France. They explained that the Army had hesitated to use such big tanks here because many highway bridges would not support their weight.

Defense commission officials, however, said steps have been taken to strengthen more than 2,000 bridges on strategic highways.

Light and medium tanks of 12 and 20 tons are already being built at the American Car and Foundry plants at Berwick, Pa.

Schools to Have Projects Under Defense Program

Harrisburg, Aug. 10 (AP)—Walter S. Cowing, state administrator, said today the National Youth administration will start a series of projects in Pennsylvania's secondary schools this fall to bring school work in line with the national defense program.

He expected to go to Washington Sunday for a two-day conference of N.Y.A. administrators and educators from states east of the Mississippi to outline the new program for the 1940-41 season.

Accompanying Cowing will be Dr. Paul L. Cressman, of the Department of Public Instruction, and John H. Tyson, principal of Upper Darby high school.

The N.Y.A. has allocated $975,427 for aiding students in Pennsylvania's secondary schools this year, Cowing said, and an additional $845,505 will be paid to college and graduate students. Approximately 34,000 students in more than 1,100 schools will benefit, he said.

Special Ceremonies to Mark Mail Pick-Up Start

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 10 (AP)—Plans for special ceremonies Monday marking the inauguration of permanent airmail pick-up service over three routes covering Pennsylvania, New York, West Virginia and Delaware were announced today by All American Aviation, Inc., operator of the service.

The three routes will provide airmail service to 56 Pennsylvania communities (including Gettysburg), 21 in West Virginia, four in Delaware and two in New York. Two additional routes, one between Pittsburgh and Williamsport and the other between Pittsburgh and Huntingdon, W. Va., and Jamestown, New York, with officials of the postoffice department and the civil aeronautics board participating.

THE UNEXPECTED

Albion, Pa., Aug 10 (AP)—When his car collided with another, John Frombach, 25, got out to aid the other driver. It turned out to be his brother, Frank, 21, who had suffered several broken ribs.

AMUSEMENTS: HERE AND THERE

NEXT WEEK AT THE MAJESTIC
Monday and Tuesday—"GOLD RUSH MAISIE."
Wednesday—"THOSE WERE THE DAYS."
Thursday—"SPORTING BLOOD."
Friday and Saturday—"MARYLAND."

FROM the African jungles of "Congo Maisie," Ann Sothern jumps to the lonesome desert of Arizona in "Gold Rush Maisie," third in the popular series dealing with the laughable stranded showgirl.

This time Maisie is en route to a job as cafe singer in a small Arizona town, when her old jallopy breaks down in the middle of the desert. A young rancher, Bill Anders, gives her overnight shelter only to have her descend upon him again with a whole family of itinerant crop-followers who are prospecting for gold.

Lee Bowman, the young Archduke of "Florian," wins his first male lead as Bill Anders, and Slim Summerville is his comic hired hand, Fred Gubbins, Virginia Weidler as Jubie Davis, daughter of the prospecting family, completes the quartet of principals.

A desert gold strike brings rejoicing and celebration only to result in equal dejection when it turns out to be a fluke, with ore not worth digging for. Then Maisie must start solving problems all over again.

* * *

That gravel-voice possessed by Andy Devine is his normal speaking voice. He speaks that way off the screen, too.

* * *

BONITA GRANVILLE ages 35 years for one sequence in the Paramount picture, "Those Were the Days," but Wally Westmore, chief of the studio's makeup department, did the job in 35 minutes. Other principals in the picture are Ezra Stone and Judith Barrett. The movie portrays college life in 1905.

* * *

There will be 117 speaking parts in Frank Capra's "Meet John Doe."

* * *

THERE have been many spectacular motion picture fire scenes which have passed practically unnoticed, but when such a scene is filmed on a studio stage litered with hay and straw and with five horses in the midst of it, that's something which needs explaining.

In "Sporting Blood," story of Southern horse racing, the burning of the stables owned by Robert Young is one of the most exciting moments of the picture.

Three days were required to construct the special stable set complete in every detail even to real dirt to form the floor. And it was most important to make the first "take" good. It just had to be for the set would be destroyed.

Dry straw and hay were strewn but of course fullest care was taken for the safety of the horses. After numerous rehearsals to assure perfection and with the horses in place, Director S. Sylvan Simon ordered the scene started. As the camera turned property men lit the straw and soon the entire set was a mass of flame. At its height, Young and William Gargan fought their way through the flames to enact one of the climaxes in the drama.

Director Simon ordered the scene stopped and firemen rushed in and extinguished the flames pronto, leaving the set charred in ruins. Fortunately the take was found perfect. The doors of the smoke-filled stage were opened and bellows of smoke poured out. The scene was over as cast and crew made their way to another stage to shoot another chapter of the story.

Maureen O'Sullivan plays opposite Young.

James Cagney and brother Bill Cagney, Warner associate producer, were semi-pro boxers and baseball players in their high school days in New York.

"MARYLAND." Screenplay by Ethel Hill and Jack Andrews. Directed by Henry King. Principals: Walter Brennan, Fay Bainter, Brenda Joyce, John Payne, Charles Ruggles, Hattie McDaniel, Marjorie Weaver, Sidney Blackmer and Ben Carter.

Two years ago 20th Century-Fox threw a technicolor spotlight on horse-racing in "Kentucky," giving Walter Brennan a role with which he copped an academy award. The present essay does the same for "Maryland," but throws the plum to one Ben Carter—or lets him take it.

Aside from the technicolor beauties of wood, field and stream, the excitement and color of fox hunts and the climactic race, "Maryland" travels well-worn paths, innocuously and pleasantly leading up to the Big Race. What lifts it above routine are the sequences assigned to Carter and his negro fellow actors, who play a generous part in the plot and give it a needed shot in the arm.

Carter (previously effective in "Little Old New York") plays Shadrach, the unregenerate, dice-weak spouse of Hattie (McDaniel), cook in the Maryland manor of Charlotte Danfield (Bainter). Charlotte is a born horse-lover, turned against horses by the riding accident which killed her husband. She clears out her stables and dismisses her trainer (Brennan) who sets up his own farm conveniently nearby for Charlotte's son (Payne) and the trainer's daughter (Joyce) to provide the romantic interest.

Mamma's horse-fear and son's horse-love precipitate conflict on the big question of son's riding Uncle Bill's prize entry in the Maryland Hunt Cup race.

This is all well enough but "Maryland" really comes to life when Shadrach is seduced by Dogface's rattling dice, losing Hattie's burial society's premium, and in desperation turns to shouting religion. The picture runs the risk of offending here, but the sequences of Shadrch's salvation are nevertheless a riot of comedy—and the "salvation" provides a good plot twist.

The cup race, filmed at its last running, is exciting and beautiful, but Carter and company are still the hits of the show. Carter, by the way, is an actor only by avocation. His real business is agentry, and he collected fees from most of the negro players in the film.

* * *

The attraction at the Strand next Saturday will be "Arizona Cyclone."

* * *

FOR the week of August 19 the following movies will be shown at the Majestic:

Monday and Tuesday—"Pride and Prejudice," with Greer Garson and Lawrence Olivier.

Wednesday—"An Angel From Texas," with Eddie Albert and Rosemary Lane.

Thursday—"We Who Are Young," with Lana Turner and John Shelton.

Friday and Saturday—"I Love You Again," with William Powell and Myrna Loy.

JAILED FOR CONTEMPT

Washington, Pa., Aug. 10 (AP)—Refusing to answer questions before the grand jury investigating the "numbers racket" in Washington county, Pete (The Greek) Krasas of Washington was jailed by Judge Robert E. Burnside until he "purges himself of contempt." Special Prosecutor Roy P. Hicks told the court Krasas balked at testifying Friday on grounds that he might incriminate himself. Another witness was jailed for two days last week on a similar complaint.

HELD FOR COURT

At a hearing held in the office of Justice of the Peace Howard G. Blocher, Littlestown, Wednesday evening, Abner S. Ingram, Germany township, was held under $300 bail for his appearance before the Adams county court. Ingram is charged with cutting a tree on the land of Kenneth Byers, also of Germany township. The warrant was served by Chief of Police Harold S. Roberts.

Former Airport Mechanic Here Hurt in Accident

Sherman Lutz, 37, mechanic at the Gettysburg airport several years, and later civilian instructor at the Pennsylvania State college airport, was severely injured this week when his plane crashed on a farm three miles from State College while he was instructing a student-pilot.

Lutz was instructing Charles Newhart, 16-year-old son of Professor Amos Newhart, originator of the safe driving schools in Pennsylvania. They were in a new plane that had been delivered to the school a few days before.

Lutz was strapped in the plane with a safety belt. The controls of the ship are said to have become jammed. Newhart was thrown from the plane before it crashed and Lutz went down with the machine. He suffered a fractured left hip, a crushed leg, a broken wrist and face injuries. The young student suffered a fractured leg and bruises.

Lutz conducted the civilian training school for pilots operated by the federal government in co-operation with Pennsylvania State college.

PHYSICIANS LISTED

Pittsburgh, Aug. 10 (AP)—The Pennsylvania committee on medical preparedness is picking out physicians it believes should "stay at home" to care for industrial workers in the event of national conscription. The committee chairman, Dr. Charles H. Henninger, of Pittsburgh, announced it had sent to the national committee "complete" information on Pennsylvania's 13,000 practicing physicians.

"HUMAN CANNON BALL" ENLISTS

Wilkes-Barre, Aug. 10 (AP)—Paul Dennis, 18, of nearby Askam, who earned a living by being "shot" from a cannon, wants to join the army. But, the "human cannon ball" told Recruiting Sergeant Joseph Weimar, he wants to get in the air corps because "I'm tired of artillery."
